

Inclusive Education Discussion

Making a Good Start: Planning and Partnerships to Support your Child's Inclusion

Wednesday 27th February 2019, Brisbane

9.30am – 12noon OR 6.15pm – 8.45pm

www.cru.org.au

Every parent wants their child's school years to be happy and successful – for school to be a place where their child learns, has friends, participates and belongs.

As the 2019 school year starts, it is timely for parents to consider what they can do to develop an effective partnership with their child's school and plan for a successful year at school.

The presentation will include a mix of family stories and practical tips, and direct families to valuable resources. There will be opportunities for questions and discussion.

- Developing and sharing your family vision
- Tips for setting up the school year well
- Knowing what to ask for – understanding key elements of an inclusive classroom and school
- Understanding key policies, frameworks and school processes.
- The role of parents in building and maintaining an inclusive school culture
- Tips for building effective partnerships with the school
- Solving problems and thinking creatively

About the Presenters:

Lisa Bridle works at CRU as Senior Consultant in Leadership Development. She will be joined by some experienced parents from the Queensland Collective for Inclusive Education who will contribute stories and tips from their own experience of supporting their child's inclusive education.

For self-managing and plan-managed NDIS participants, please contact CRU if you would like more information on how this discussion could help your child achieve their goals.

Who should attend?

These discussion sessions (choose a morning or evening time) are open to all parents seeking an inclusive education for their child. There will be tips and examples relevant to early school years, upper primary and high school.

Families not yet in school but wanting to learn about inclusive education are very welcome.
