

Meaningful Work for You:

How to find it or create it

Everyone can work! Having a job is an important part of a good life. It allows us to earn a living, to contribute, to develop our skills, as well as build relationships and be part of our community.

This workshop is for people with disability who want to work in open employment but have found that the traditional pathways don't always lead to the jobs you want.

At this workshop you will:

- Learn how to come up with job ideas based on what you are good at and interested in.
- Work out the things that will set you up to do well in a job.
- Hear about different and creative ways to find meaningful jobs.
- Bring all the parts together and figure out your next steps.

About the Presenter: Nellie Godwin-Welch

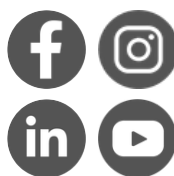

Nellie has grown up as a sister to someone with complex disabilities, and was exposed to CRU's work as part of building a good life for their sibling from a young age. Nellie has spent the last decade working in the disability sector, as a direct support worker, case manager, Circle of Support facilitator and mentor. Nellie has supported individuals, alongside their families, to find employment, move into their own home, start their own micro-businesses, study, volunteer and build friendships and relationships.
