

What You Always Needed to Know about Intellectual Impairment but were Mostly Never Told

Presented by John Armstrong

Thursday 15 February, 2018 – Brisbane

www.cru.org.au

About the workshop:

Often we speak about focusing on the 'ordinary' and 'typical' ways and means to help people have access to the good things of life. However, it's also necessary to understand and appreciate how intellectual impairment can affect people in very real ways.

Participants in this workshop will gain greater insight into the challenges that people face in their daily lives, as well as gaining an appreciation of how easily others misunderstand and mistreat people with an intellectual disability.

The workshop will equip participants in practical ways by offering four windows to look through as a way of understanding people's needs and how best to respond to meet those needs.

Some of the topics include:

- The impact of intellectual impairment
- How to respond when it's not clear why people are doing what they're doing
- The relationship between the challenges of intellectual impairment and difficulties we can all experience

About the presenter:

John Armstrong has been involved in the lives of people with a disability and their families for over 40 years. He has worked as a trainer and consultant across many settings with individuals, families and agencies throughout Australia & New Zealand, affording him a large scope of experience & learning. John is a Senior Social Role Valorisation Trainer as well as having extensive involvement with Citizen Advocacy. John has a particular interest in promoting people's welfare and reducing the potential for neglect and harm.

Who should attend?

This informative workshop is for all of those who are looking for practical ways to support people with an intellectual impairment to succeed and be understood.

This will include family members of people with disability and workers at all levels, including direct support workers and managers.
