

Inclusion and Belonging at the local school

The parent advocacy toolkit

Inclusion at the local school is possible and has been so for decades. It is a human right and supported by research and evidence. Yet, making inclusion a reality for every child is not always easy. Parents play a vital role in working with school to achieve meaningful inclusion.

This free, face-to-face, and interactive workshop offers a valuable opportunity to connect with others and learn practical ways to support inclusive education for your child with disability.

This workshop is led by CRU facilitators passionate about inclusive lives for children with disability.

This workshop will help you to:

- Recognise your child's strengths
- Build a vision for inclusion and understand inclusion at school
- Learn about rights and supports
- Work well with the school team and advocate with confidence
